WELCOMED THEIR FORMER PASTOR

REV. J. W. WILLIAMS, D. D., PREACHES HERE AGAIN.

He Resigned from the Pastorate of the South Main Avenue Church Seven Years Ago and Spent the Intervening Time in Wales—He Was Greeted by Two Large Congregations—Syllabus of His Sermon.

Rev. J. W. Williams, D. D., now of Swansea, Wales, formerly of West Scranton, once more has filled the pulpit of the South Main Avenue First Welsh Baptist church. He preached at both services yesterday in the Welsh language in the morning and in English in the evening.

On discovering that their former pastor had been incomplete they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. In the light of this teaching of the apostle and the sanction he must have given to the second baptism of the Ephesians, it is conclusive that the ordinance when administered, except on profession of repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus, is both insufficient and worthless.

CUPIDITY OF THE JEWS.

Some of the itinerant Jewish exorcists who witnessed these ministrations upon the sick regarded this potent power as a new source of wealth if they could only command it. They had heard and remembered the mystic words used by the apostle, and resolved to try their own hand at the work.

THE MAGIC POWER.

The school of Tyranus had become a center of some unknown and immeasurable force in the city, and from it flowed streams of beneficent influences in all directions. Moral and physical evil, in all its varied forms and character, disappeared at its command.

LOVE OF GAIN ENTERS.

Alas! this is not an uncommon error in our age. Men form their estimate of Christianity as it brings them gain, and profess it in order to command the esteem and confidence of their fellow citizens.

Jim Austin and John Lee, colored waiters at the Randolph, street bridge Saturday night at the hour when witches are said to stalk abroad and they had a conflict.

Last night he informed a Tribune reporter that the trouble grew out of a matter of employment. Lee went away a few weeks ago, and Austin was hired to relieve him.

YEOMAN OF THE TEXAS.

He Spent Yesterday in This City as the Guest of John Merriman, of Capouse Avenue.

Louis Merriman, a yeoman on the battleship Texas, spent yesterday in the city as the guest of his brother, John Merriman, of Capouse avenue, Green Ridge. The Texas is now in the Brooklyn navy yard, having rents in her fixed up which were made during the engagement of Santiago on July 2, when Corvo's flag was destroyed.

During the great battle he was at his station in the engine room, down in the hold of the ship, and only got a glimpse of the light when he was allowed to go on deck for a few minutes.

The effect of this was keenly felt in the boiler and engine rooms and most of the men who were toiling down there making good for the Texas to give the fleet's Spanish cruisers a spirited chase, thought the time for the closing of their earthly accounts had come.

There was a decrease. The number of working people employed was 11,272 as against 11,580, a decrease of 308 or 2.7 per cent. The average days of employment were 296 as against 289, an increase of 7 or 2.4 per cent.

DEATH OF ANDREW NICOL

Was Inside Superintendent of Mines of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company for Years.

Andrew Nicol, of Green Ridge, died at 10:20 Saturday night at his residence at the corner of Dickson avenue and Delaware street. He was within four years of his 81st birthday.

At the age of 13 the deceased started to learn the carpenter's trade in his father's shop, and went to Glasgow four years later to work on buildings, putting in his spare time evenings in studying draughting and patternmaking.

He was sent to Sheffield, Ill., by the company and opened up a mine. In 1870 a law providing for the inspection of the anthracite coal fields was passed and then Governor John W. Geary appointed him inspector, which position he occupied for six months.

REV. DR. SMITH SPOKE. Filled the Pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Dr. Smith, of Baltimore, preached at the funeral services in the First Presbyterian church yesterday of large congregations. Dr. Smith was the pastor of the Second Presbyterian church at Baltimore for forty years, but resigned about three years ago and was installed as pastor emeritus. He is greatly beloved in the city and wherever he goes. He is now 78 years old, but the vigor and charm of his oratory is as strong as ever. He will remain in town for services at the First church next Sunday.

Yesterday morning his theme was "The Voices of the Stones." Last night he gave a brilliant and impassioned study of the work of Ezekiel, which he said was a genuine Mount Blanc, towering far and on the one side reflecting the fading glow of Judaism and on the other the rising Sun of Righteousness.

Andrew Nicol, of Green Ridge, died at 10:20 Saturday night at his residence at the corner of Dickson avenue and Delaware street. He was within four years of his 81st birthday. Mr. Nicol saw more service with the Delaware and Hudson company than any other man in its employ, beginning in 1851 and continued until Jan. 1, 1897, when he was, in consideration of his long and valuable services, placed upon the retired list as a pensioner. He was born in the Highlands of Scotland, in the parish of News Daily, Apr. 26, 1817. He was a son of John Nicol, of the same locality, and a grandson of David, who was a shepherd. The family originated in the highlands and in the county of Meik Nicol. The deceased came with his father to this country in 1851 and settled in Carbondale. At the age of 13 the deceased started to learn the carpenter's trade in his father's shop, and went to Glasgow four years later to work on buildings, putting in his spare time evenings in studying draughting and patternmaking. His next occupation was in a machine shop in Glasgow. He branched next into civil and mining engineering. In 1851 he sailed for America, and lived for a few weeks in Albany. He next proceeded to Carbondale and was given a position as surveyor in the Delaware and Hudson mines. In December, 1859, he came to Scranton, though still with the same company, which by that time owned mines from Carbondale to Wilkes-Barre, and he served in varied capacities as mining engineer and inside superintendent. He was sent to Sheffield, Ill., by the company and opened up a mine. In 1870 a law providing for the inspection of the anthracite coal fields was passed and then Governor John W. Geary appointed him inspector, which position he occupied for six months. In Glasgow, Mr. Nicol married Helen Brown. Her grandfather was John Brown, a prominent man in Maybole, Ayr, and her father, David Brown, was a merchant and manufacturer. Her brother, William Brown, lives in Green Ridge, and her sister, Mrs. Margaret Fryden, is a resident of Murfreesboro, Ill. Five children were born to them, Janet, Andrew, Agnes, Margaret and Mary. Janet and Agnes died in early childhood and Andrew at the age of 40 died a hero's death. It was in a mine fire in Olyphant in September, 1889. He was assistant to his father, and in his efforts to subdue the flames and save the other men he was so burned that he died in three weeks. He carried two men through smoke a half mile to the foot of the shaft and they were rescued, but he being the last one to leave had to face death. Mr. Nicol never lived in a rented house in this country. He bought one the first week he was in Carbondale. He acquired several other properties in different parts of Green Ridge since his residence in Scranton. He was a steadfast member of the Green Ridge Presbyterian church, having been one of its founders. The funeral will take place Tuesday, Aug. 9, at 3 p. m. Friends desiring to view the remains may do so after 10 a. m. Tuesday.
